Mental disorders, life-impairing cognitive and emotional impairments that can be disabling and can lead to social isolation and impaired function.

Mental disorders can be caused by a variety of factors, including genetic factors, brain injury, and environmental factors.

Adults at risk for mental health disorders can be found in rural areas.

How the city affects mental health - Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

The prevalence of mental disorders has been studied worldwide, but the relationship between urbanization and mental health is not yet fully understood.

Prevalence rates of mood and anxiety disorders were significantly higher in urban areas.

Housing problems are common among adults with mental health disorders.

Addressing Poverty and Mental Illness

The prevalence of mental disorders is high among low-income populations, and poverty is a significant contributor to mental illness.

Mental disorders and poverty are closely linked, with poverty often leading to mental illness and mental illness often leading to poverty.

Rural Mental Health Overview - Rural Health Information Hub

Rural mental health care is often limited, with few mental health professionals available.

Gendering Neighbourhood Marginalization Metrics in Mental Health

Neighbourhood marginalization metrics can be used to identify areas with higher levels of social disadvantage and greater need for mental health services.

Mental Health Care, Family, and Community Associations

Mental health care, family, and community associations can play a critical role in improving mental health outcomes.

Mental health and illness which have informed mental health service provision14. In rural areas there can often be apprehension around help seeking and a fear of the community.

Looking for help? Here’s where to find a therapist.

People genetically predisposed to mental health disorders such as schizophrenia, bipolar disorder and anorexia.

Cutting-edge tech serves patients in urban, rural communities

Cutting-edge technology is revolutionizing mental health care, with new tools and approaches being developed to improve access and outcomes.

Insecure' star Kendrick Sampson on mental illness and owning black stories

Kendrick Sampson is an American actor and mental health advocate who has been vocal about his own experience with mental illness.

Concluding thought: air pollution exposure raises depression risk, affects brain function

Air pollution exposure has been linked to an increased risk of depression and other mental health outcomes.

Mental disorders, life-impairing cognitive and emotional impairments that can be disabling and can lead to social isolation and impaired function.

Mental disorders are a leading cause of disability worldwide.

The prevalence of mental disorders is high among low-income populations, and poverty is a significant contributor to mental illness.

Access to mental health care resources can vary widely across the United States. The survey found that compared to urban areas, rural 911 call centers were more likely to lack access to mental health services.

Rural areas are often not set off in many rural communities across the country because adequate services are not present.

People genetically predisposed to mental health disorders such as schizophrenia, bipolar disorder and anorexia.

Mental disorders are a leading cause of disability worldwide.

The prevalence of mental disorders is high among low-income populations, and poverty is a significant contributor to mental illness.

The prevalence of mental disorders has been studied worldwide, but the relationship between urbanization and mental health is not yet fully understood.

Mental disorders and poverty are closely linked, with poverty often leading to mental illness and mental illness often leading to poverty.

Rural mental health care is often limited, with few mental health professionals available.

Gendering Neighbourhood Marginalization Metrics in Mental Health

Neighbourhood marginalization metrics can be used to identify areas with higher levels of social disadvantage and greater need for mental health services.

Mental Health Care, Family, and Community Associations

Mental health care, family, and community associations can play a critical role in improving mental health outcomes.

Mental health and illness which have informed mental health service provision14. In rural areas there can often be apprehension around help seeking and a fear of the community.

Looking for help? Here’s where to find a therapist.

People genetically predisposed to mental health disorders such as schizophrenia, bipolar disorder and anorexia.

Cutting-edge tech serves patients in urban, rural communities

Cutting-edge technology is revolutionizing mental health care, with new tools and approaches being developed to improve access and outcomes.

Insecure' star Kendrick Sampson on mental illness and owning black stories

Kendrick Sampson is an American actor and mental health advocate who has been vocal about his own experience with mental illness.

Concluding thought: air pollution exposure raises depression risk, affects brain function

Air pollution exposure has been linked to an increased risk of depression and other mental health outcomes.

Mental disorders, life-impairing cognitive and emotional impairments that can be disabling and can lead to social isolation and impaired function.

Mental disorders are a leading cause of disability worldwide.

The prevalence of mental disorders is high among low-income populations, and poverty is a significant contributor to mental illness.

Access to mental health care resources can vary widely across the United States. The survey found that compared to urban areas, rural 911 call centers were more likely to lack access to mental health services.

Rural areas are often not set off in many rural communities across the country because adequate services are not present.

People genetically predisposed to mental health disorders such as schizophrenia, bipolar disorder and anorexia.

Mental disorders are a leading cause of disability worldwide.

The prevalence of mental disorders is high among low-income populations, and poverty is a significant contributor to mental illness.

The prevalence of mental disorders has been studied worldwide, but the relationship between urbanization and mental health is not yet fully understood.

Mental disorders and poverty are closely linked, with poverty often leading to mental illness and mental illness often leading to poverty.

Rural mental health care is often limited, with few mental health professionals available.

Gendering Neighbourhood Marginalization Metrics in Mental Health

Neighbourhood marginalization metrics can be used to identify areas with higher levels of social disadvantage and greater need for mental health services.

Mental Health Care, Family, and Community Associations

Mental health care, family, and community associations can play a critical role in improving mental health outcomes.

Mental health and illness which have informed mental health service provision14. In rural areas there can often be apprehension around help seeking and a fear of the community.

Looking for help? Here’s where to find a therapist.

People genetically predisposed to mental health disorders such as schizophrenia, bipolar disorder and anorexia.