The Chippewa Landscape of Louise Erdrich

Allen Richard Chavkin

1999

This collection of essays focuses on Erdrich’s writings rooted in the Chippewa experience. The contributors investigate narrative structure, sign of ethnographic detail, and the act of writing in relation to Indian, her use of metaphors, her efforts to counter stereotypes of American Indian women, and her use of comedy.

Where “Indians’ Fear to Tread?”

Fabiola C. Quintero

2001

The two fields of contemporary Native American literature and culture exist in the tension between two literary traditions: the Native oral and literary tradition and the modern Western mainstream literary influence. In her North Dakota quartet Love Medicine (1984), The Beet Queen (1989), The Bingo Palace (1994), and LaRose (2016), acclaimed Native American author, Louise Erdrich (b. 1954) exemplifies where and how these traditions meet and interact. A postmodern reading of the quartet allows for a cross-cultural analysis of the ways in which characters enter into relationship with the natural world, they are better able to confront and reclaim shadow. By exploring the relationship between nature and the psyche, this approach suggests an understanding of the natural world as a metaphor for the human psyche.

Louise Erdrich’s Fictional Worlds: Local, Global, and Postmodern

Allan Richard Chavkin

1999

This collection of essays focuses on Erdrich’s first three polychoric novels—Love Medicine, The Beet Queen, and The Bingo Palace—and her most recent work LaRose. Erdrich’s work has developed an increasing political acuity to the relationship between ethics and aesthetics in Native American literature and culture. In this book, Chavkin argues that Erdrich’s works, particularly her recent novels, offer up-to-date guides to the recent work of major contemporary North American authors. Written by leading critics and by Erdrich herself, these accessible volumes will appeal to advanced undergraduate and postgraduate students, facilitating discussion and supporting close analysis of the most important contemporary American and Canadian fiction.

Louise Erdrich’s Love Medicine—Associate Professor in the Department of English Hertha D Sweet Women 2000

Love Medicine is one of Louise Erdrich’s best novels, popular among students and instructors. The 20th-century cycle narrated by a variety of characters, the book chronicles the intertwined histories of Chipewa and mixed bloods on the modern reservation. The novel is a freewheeling literary work that follows three generations of Ojibwe families. Set against the tumultuous politics of the reservation, the lives of the Kashpaws and their neighbors are shaped by love and loss, and the story is a moving and original examination of Native American identity.
